

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999. The public sector has grown from 10% of the economy to 15% of the economy.

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

Another reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A third reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A fourth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A fifth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A sixth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A seventh reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

An eighth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A ninth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.

A tenth reason for the increase in public sector employment is the increasing demand for public services. The population is ageing, and there is a growing need for health and social care services. There is also a growing demand for education and training services.